Ms. Ana Jurpik

HELLO!

I'm Ms. Ana Jurpik. I discovered the ability to render at a very young age. By pulling images from my mind, I was able to recreate visually through paints, pencil, ink or back then, crayons.

Throughout my adulthood, I searched out various ways of expression, including still life to life drawing, and experimenting with the use of mediums from charcoal to sculpture to music. My studio is now located in Markham, Ontario.

I was one of the 25 selected Canadian artists who voyaged to paint Greenland and the High Arctic in the summer of 2006, celebrating the 100th anniversary of the first explorer to complete this journey. My work is located in private and corporate collections in Canada and the United States, and in the Permanent Collection at the Vancouver Maritime Museum and the City of Spoleto, Italy. I have had the pleasure of teaching young children this past year as well and I truly enjoy the way they freely express themselves. I hope to share this same love with you soon!
